Year	2013 AD—1434 AH
Abstract	The study has reached some conclusions. Since the study deals with the levels in the speeches under analysis, the findings will be surveyed along with these levels respectively. The following conclusions are reaches at: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Women and men differ from one another in their use of some communication behaviours. Men and women are considered to be naturally different in some aspects. Women use conversation and communication to build relationships and for purpose of collaboration. Men, on the other hand, use conversation and communication to show dominance, to protect themselves from others and generally seem to view conversation as a contest a struggle, to preserve independence and avoid failure.</li> </ol>
