Year	2008
Abstract	in the theory of the basic scheme of reference handed down by Arab legacy and the cognitive theory published in the USA in 1987. It is used the jargon for cognitive grammar to present the arguments, but in the future this theory will only be the basis for a holistic modern linguistics very different from the traditional USA linguistic theories referred to in the thesis. In this thesis, we have tried to highlight the central role of perceptual abilities, imagination, understanding and symbolization, and the holistic interaction of the four components simultaneously. Emphasis is placed on a field of reflection that is not common in traditional studies, both Western and Arab notions arise and taking advantage of new scientific advances, especially in quantum physics. It is a starting point for a new philosophy that links all the sciences, and responding to questions that trouble linguists today. He has applied this model to the meaning of Arab and Spanish prepositions.
